Concert--Dance

NEXT THURSDAY

PENINSULA MASONIC CLUB

WILL ENTERTAIN

The members of the recently organized Peninsula Masonic Club have planned a splendid concert and dance for next Thursday evening, February 5, at Beubough's Ocean Beach dance pavilion. The famous Sciot's band will give a grand concert from 8 to 9:30 p. m. and the dance music from then until midnight will be furnished by Carr Brothers' orchestra. During the concert two solos will be played by A. H. Knoll, cornet soloist, with the Sciot's band of San Diego Pyramid No. 32.

Mr. Knoll won the cornet playing championship in 1883 and later was cornet soloist of the Boston Cadet band. There has been a great advance sale of tickets at $1.00 per couple.

O. B. CHAMBER

MEETS NEXT MONDAY FOR

MONTHLY SESSION

A big batch of business, including paving propositions, boosting the library bond issue and consideration of councilmanic nominations favorable to the beach districts, awaits the regular meeting of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce next Monday night, February 2, at the Congregational Church building on DeFoe street. It is quite probable that some of the candidates whose nominations have been announced for city offices will be present to outline their individual platforms. The present status of the playground petition will be duly explained by the civic improvement committee and other important reports will be acted upon by the chamber as a body.

BOY SCOUTS FIXING

FOR FINE CELEBRATION

ON NEXT FRIDAY

One of the big features of the Scout anniversary celebration to be held at the Indian Village on next Friday evening, February 6, will be the band concert given by the Naval Training Station band from 7:30 to 8:15. The band will play through the courtesy of Rear Admiral Robertson and Captain Sellers, both of whom are much interested in the San Diego Scouts.

Between selections played by the band, the Scouts will play mass games under the leadership of Assistant Deputy Commissioner Chester Van Dusen, who is in charge of the game work for the council.

Parents and friends of Ocean Beach and Pacific Beach Scouts and all interested are invited to the concert, the court of honor and camp fire in honor of Chief Scout Executive West.

NEW HARDWARE FIRM

AT MISSION BEACH

Legal acknowledgment has been made by Louis N. Shapiro and Guy Camerlengo of their copartnership in the hardware business at Mission Beach under the title of the Mission Beach Hardware Company. A handsome new building is being completed for the firm in the center of the business district on Mission boulevard. When opened for business the new company will carry a complete line of hardware and material of like description at popular prices.

DEMISE OF G. H. BAKER

At the residence, 4741 Orchard avenue, Ocean Beach, George H. Baker, husband of Mary Baker and father of Harry Baker, passed away January 24. He was a native of Indiana, aged 62 years. Funeral services were held at Merkley's funeral parlors, 3655 Fifth street, last Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Hart officiating. Interment took place at Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Miss Julia Pickett

EXCELLENT QUALITIES

POSSESSED BY CANDIDATE

FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Miss Julia Pickett, who took out her nomination petition this week is the first candidate for a member of the board of education to announce herself for the coming spring election.

The following qualifications and experiences form the basis upon which Miss Pickett hopes the public feel justified in supporting her in her candidacy:

She is a graduate of Smith College, at Northampton, Mass. She had charge of the history department of a government college in Pekin, China, for six years. She was a member of the faculty of Ferry hall, a department of Lake Forest University, there taking a special vocational course, after which she spent one year as supervisor of vocational guidance in New York public schools. She spent one year in the Henry street settlement work in New York, one year as manager of the New York central branch of the Y. W. C. A. employment bureau, and over two years as vocational supervisor of 1500 women for the Western Electric Company of New York, after which, on account of her mother's health, she came to San Diego. She lives with her mother and sister at 3645 Third street in their own home. She also owns other properties in this city.

Since coming to San Diego several years ago, Miss Pickett has continued the same line of work and is now director of the vocational placement bureau for the San Diego Business and Professional Women's Club, 411 Scripps building. She would be pleased to devote some of her valuable experience to the schools if the public so desires. This work has given her an unusual opportunity to become familiar with the special needs and conditions of business girls and women in our community. She has had daily experience in adjusting their training and experience to positions in business and professional lives.

Miss Pickett is particularly interested in helping girls who are unable to have more than a high school education to secure the best possible preparation for the positions which they hope to occupy.

CONNECTING STREET

PLANNED FOR POINT LOMA

FROM BEACH TO BAY

Upon the receipt of land deeds this week from the San Diego Electric Railway Company, plans were made by the City Council for the establishment of a street on what was the right of way of the old Point Loma railroad on Point Loma, between Rosecrans and Chatsworth boulevards.

The new street will give access to considerable Point Loma property and virtually will mean another connecting beach and bay artery in the Point Loma section.

The transfer of the right of way deeds was agreed on at a conference between the transportation committee, headed by Councilman Heilbron, and officials of the street railway company.

On receiving the deeds last Monday the council voted to send a vote of thanks to General Manager Claus Spreckels of the street car company.

"Art" is the subject of the poster exhibit at the O. B. Library this week. The following books on this subject are for circulation: "Opollo—History of Art," Reinach; "Art of Painting," Mach; Guide to Pictures," Coffin; "Studies in Pictures," Coffin; "Dutch Art of Nineteenth Century," Marins; "Modern Painting," Moore; Handbook of Greek and Roman Sculpture," Mack; "Schools and Masters of Painting," Radcliffe; American Master of Painting," Coffin; "One Hundred Masterpieces," La Farge; "History of Art," Vol. 11," Orpen; "Later British School of Art."

Vote the Library bonds next election. Ocean Beach is to receive $15,000 for its new home.

ELECTION DAY SET

FOR LIBRARY BONDS

The City Council this week set the date of Tuesday, March 24, for an election to decide whether $60,000 in bonds shall be voted for branch library construction. This is the same day that the city primary election will be held, so voters may ballot on the candidates and the bonds at the same time.

Of the $60,000 issue, $25,000 is desired for a branch in Logan Heights, $20,000 for University Heights and FIFTEEN THOUSAND FOR OCEAN BEACH.

MATINEE SUNDAY

NEW WEEKLY FEATURE WITH

NEWS-REEL CHANGE

Beginning tomorrow, Sunday, Manager Ray Ericsson announces the introduction of a matinee every Sunday, beginning at 2:30 p. m., and this innovation will be continued during the prevailing season of chilly evenings. A special feature for Sundays will be the presentation of the uproariously funny "Go-Getter" series, the first booking being entitled, "Getting Along." The main reel will be "Wine," with an all-star cast, including Clara Bow, Robert Agned, Myrtle Stedman and Forrest Stanley. For the mid-week, next Tuesday and Wednesday. Virginia Valli and Wallace Beery will be seen in "The Signal Tower," introducing a remarkably thrilling train wreck scene. Next Friday and Saturday the famous star, Priscilla Dean, will appear as the titular character in "The Siren of Seville." The newsreel heretofore presented on Sundays will hereafter be shown on Friday and Saturday evenings, thereby giving more uniformity to the shows throughout the week, with a good comedy added at all times.

"The fortification for the present will be an earthwork. Room will be left on the Point for the erection of a casemented fortress in the future, if occasion calls for it.

"As the distance is too great to admit of carrying the workmen over to the Point every day, huts will be erected in its neighborhood, probably at the Playa.

"Colonel Stewart will remain in San Diego for a short time to superintend the selection of the site for the earthwork and other preliminary business. The work will be permanently under the charge of Lieutenant Weeden, who will push the matter as fast as possible. The Colonel thinks actual work on the fortification will begin about the first day of July.

"The party brought with them a complete engineering and surveying outfit. Every detail of the work is prepared for, and the building of the huts will doubtless be under way shortly."

This is followed a few days later by an item that gives further details and shows, I think, the tense excitement felt here generally. The great work was at hand!

THE FORTRESS

The Fifty Thousand Dollars but a Preliminary—A First Class Fortification.

"The plan of the United States authorities in reference to the fortification now under way here contemplates a work of the first class. The appropriation of $50,000 by the last Congress was only designed to cover preliminary work. The plans now being developed by Colonel Stewart and Lieutenant Weeden clearly look to the spending of $250,000 and perhaps more. It would be a very picayunish thing for the United States Government to erect puny and insignificant defensive works in a harbor which lies right on the Mexican line. the very ultima thule of the southwestern portion of this country and which will be the terminus of a great continental railway.

"A formidable fortification and a respectable garrison are on the cards for San Diego."

Then this on June 21:

"The work on the fortifications at Ballast Point is progressing finely. Three buildings are erected. A temporary wharf is being built up to deep water. It will be about sixty feet long. The Government intends to erect a substantial and permanent wharf."

The following item appears on the same date and has its significance as a matter of record, touching that old spring on North Island.

"Two of the parties dispossessed at Ballast Point by the fortification party, Mr. Prince Johnson and a companion, have gone over to the Peninsula (North Island) and started in to farm near the spring thereon. Captain Bogart once raised a fine crop of barley on that part of the Peninsula."

Then on June 27 is this:

"The Ancon yesterday brought back Lieutenant Weeden, who will have the superintendence of the work of constructing the fortifications. We saw that gentleman yesterday and in reply to our inquiries he assured us that the rumor which has been rife in San Diego for some time that he intended to bring down laborers from San Francisco to work on the fortifications has no foundation in fact. He will employ San Diegans as laborers. He brought down with him 25 workers in concrete, who require to be skilled in that branch of the business.

Lieutenant Weeden assures us that very satisfactory progress has been made in the work during his absence, and that he will begin operations on a considerable scale about the first of July."

These operations attracted the attention of all San Diego. Colonel Couts over at the Guajome ranch cane and experienced a series of interesting recollections of the old times:

"Yesterday (July 10, 1873), Colonel Couts, Captain Wilcox and Lieutenant Weeden visited the Playa. It will be remembered that some twenty-odd years ago Colonel Couts and other gentlemen were interested in an artesian well there, which had been bored to a depth of some 500 feet, and abandoned on account of the unwillingness of persons interested to respond to further assessments. Colonel Couts felt some curiosity to see if he could find the exact spot and, notwithstanding the fact that 22 years had elapsed since its abandonment, he went straight to the well. It was covered up, and the hole plugged when work was suspended. The piping seems to be in perfect order. - - -

Big Adpageant

CAMPFIRE GIRLS

REPRESENT OCEAN BEACH

IN PARADE OF THE ADS

Ocean Beach occupies a prominent place in the big Adpageant which is being put on at the civic auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings of this week by the Advertising Club of San Diego.

Nine pretty Ocean Beach Campfire Girls, all daughters of prominent residents of Ocean Beach, form a marching delegation in the Parade of the Ads, which is a novel feature of the Adpageant, to advertise to the large audiences the attractions of this place of beautiful seaside homes.

Garbed in dresses of light green, trimmed with kelp, wearing hats to simulate seashells, and carrying cards which will spell out the name "Ocean Beach," the entry gives promise of being one of the most effective in the parade and one which will emphasize the high residential qualities of the Beach. The girls taking part include:

Misses Elno Steinberg, Dorothy Gottesburen, Lola Greer, Selma Martin, Linda Wyckoff, Roberta Sharp, Lenore Delmont, Lois Lee, Blanche Wright, Eva Norman, Barbara Burdette and Esther Hinrichs.

The Adpageant is a novel form of entertainment for San Diego and bids fair to be one of the most ambitious entertainments of its kind ever put on in the city. It will consist of a beautiful pageant with special dances and wonderful lighting before the Queen of the Adpageant, Miss Lillian Porter, and Miss San Diego (Miss Annette Masten) and their combined courts numbering nearly 300 persons, and will be followed by the Parade of the Ads, which will comprise beautiful floats and novel marching delegations in which several hundred persons will take part and which will present the message of each entrant in an original and clever manner. The latter part of the show will be nearly three hours of informal dancing to the music of two big orchestras under the direction of Cliff Webster.

Seats are now on sale at the Thearle Music company, or can be obtained at the auditorium on the nights of the show.

GEORGE PETTIS KILLED

AND HOUSE SET AFIRE

IN PACIFIC BEACH

Accused of murdering George Pettis at a Pacific Beach residence, in which both had lived, and afterward setting the body afire with blankets soaked in kerosene, James A. Tungate has been held without bail on charges of murder and arson for a preliminary hearing on February 24. When arrested Tungate first denied knowledge of the killing but later admitted seeing the crime, blaming it upon a friend whose name police are withholding. A shot gun, found in the possession of Tungate when arrested, is stated by the police to have been the weapon with which the brutal murder was committed.

To Procure Broad and Sharp Tuning

Radio Outfit Should Tune Sharply—Low-Loss Instruments Aid.

With the ever-increasing number of broadcasting stations in the larger cities the problem of interference prevails.

It takes a mighty good receiver to pick out each individual station without interference from others.

The accompanying sketch shows the difference between sharp and broad tuning. In the upper sketch is shown the dial reading of a broadly tuned receiving set. The hump is very broad. It really represents a tuning circuit in which interference prevails.

The lower drawing shows a "peak" or sharply tuned circuit, in which all of the energy from a certain station is not spread out, but is concentrated in one spot, giving maximum signal strength. The "hump" circuit has a high-loss variable condenser in circuit and perhaps a high-loss tuning inductance.

Both circuits receive broadcasting with good strength, but the circuit with the peak receives all of the local stations without interference, while the hump circuit receives only the nearby stations with interference. A good "low-loss" condenser having reduced radio frequency losses will turn a "hump" circuit to a "peak" circuit.

Diagram Showing Difference Between Broad and Sharp Tuning.

Not alone will a low loss condenser sharpen tuning, but it will go a long way toward getting clearer signals. The weaker stations which do not come through when the circuit is full o fresistance paths and other losses will come in clearly with good volume when a better condenser is employed.

Vernier condensers are often a cause of poor results and broad tuning. It is best to use a straight condenser and, if necessary, a vernier dial may be fastened to the shaft of the condenser.

Poorly designed coils are often a cause of broad tuning. It is best to keep all metal from the vicinity of the coil windings. It has become a practice to wind coils in basket weave style with an air core to reduce dielectric losses in the circuit.

In winding coils it is best to plan using No. 18 DCC or No. 20 DCC wire, as it has low radio-frequency losses and good conductivity. This size wire is especially recommended for basket-weave coils.—Chicago Daily Journal.

THE MECHANICAL TELL-TALE

IN A large apartment house not long ago one of the upper-floor tenants discovered that by placing her ear to the radiator she could hear a canary singing in one of the down-stairs apartments. The steam pipes had carried the sound waves throughout the house.

The developments in radio the past year or two have forcibly demonstrated to the people that sound waves are a substantial reality; a tangible something that can be controlled and made use of.

Now that ways have been found, not only to pick up these waves but to amplify them, it behooves the people who originate such waves in the form of conversation to "watch their step," so to speak.

If the steam pipes in an apartment house will conduct the song of a canary bird, it is quite sure that they will also conduct conversation, and we are met with the possibility of our most private talks being picked up and amplified by the gossiper in the sky-parlor.

However, necessity is the mother of invention and privacy is very much of a necessity—at least at times. It would give many of us a thrill if we could sit in our apartments and say what we have often thought of the janitor, knowing he was listening in the basement to the return exhaust pipe, but the future may require a filter that will break up our voices so that they may not be picked up by our neighbors.

Community Building

Twelve Good Reasons for Owning One's Home

Here are a round dozen reasons why the "Own Your Home" movement is worth while for every man to join eventually. "Why not now?"—to use a well-known advertising slogan. The reasons follow:

A home is the best investment you can make, and it will yield the biggest returns on your money.

It creates a feeling of assurance and independence.

It is a big step toward future happiness and success.

You need not wait until you have the full amount in order to begin purchasing your home.

By making monthly payments you pay for your home with the same amount of money, sometimes less than you are now paying for rent.

Each month your equity in the property becomes greater.

When you are living in your home you are not living in an atmosphere of uncertainty.

You will be secure in the thought, "I will not be forced to move from the neighborhood in which I have lived for many years."

You can continue to worship in the same church, your children can continue at the same school and you can continue the association and friendship of your neighbors.

You do not have to importune the landlord, who is deaf to your urgent plea to fix the roof, the furnace or the porch.

When you own your home you add prestige to your standing in the community and among your business associates.

To own a home is a duty you owe your wife and children—almost as important as life insurance.

"Consider this dozen daily," paraphrased another "ad" man.

Would Take Billboards From Public Highways

The National Association of Real Estate Boards has issued a statement expressing approval of a law just becoming effective in Iowa, which prohibits billboards on public highways.

The new Iowa law was enacted primarily as a measure of public safety. A confusion of advertising signs along the way obscures the official signs placed to warn of turns, sharp curves, railroad crossings and the like. But it is no less valuable as a measure for conserving scenic spots for the enjoyment of the general public, the association points out in its statement.

The view from the highway does not belong to the individual who owns the property along the right of way. It is a community possession. Realtors are interested in the whole present movement to eliminate billboards from highways where they are a blot on scenery, a priceless public possession.

Modern Principles

A grocer in a western town has an arrangement with the pastors of the various churches whereby he "swaps" with them the names of new families moving into town.

The merchant and the ministers jot the names down in little notebooks and compare every two weeks.

This is one of the plans used to get the names of newcomers.

They also watch the papers and keep in touch with real estate men. As soon as they learn of a new family in town they call personally.

Finding the right place to attend church or trade is always a job for a woman who has just moved. So she is usually glad to give an order to the one who takes the trouble to call on her. And by starting on a friendly basis they generally succeed in getting her trade and holding it.—The Progressive Grocer.

City's Need of Trees

Beautification of Illinois cities through city control of all trees along the streets, for which there are laws on the statute books, is being brought to the attention of various cities by P. L. Phelps of Rochelle, Ill., scientific forester, supported by the Illinois Municipal league.

"Providing shade," Mr. Phelps says, "should be as much a municipal function as providing lights or sidewalks. To obtain satisfactory results it is necessary that the city own and control all street trees.

"Nothing adds more to the beauty of a city than its well-ordered trees. This fact long has been recognized, and for many years householders have been planting trees adjoining their property in an effort to beautify that part of the city in which they live."

Change in City Managers

City managers are not invariably regarded by the cities themselves as precious possessions, a correspondent of the London Times in America writes to that journal. Forty per cent of 219 managers have been allowed to serve for less than two years. One city in Oregon has had ten managers in nine years, and Columbus, Ga., had three in one year. Nevertheless, for all its drawbacks, in theory and practice, the city manager plan seems to be making steady headway.

Lightning Photographed

Photography determines the distance of a lightning flash, and hence the dimensions of any of its features. Two cameras are mounted side by side and exposed at the same time, says Nature Magazine. Objects of known distance from the point of observation are photographed along with the lightning, and a comparison of the two pictures, plus a little mathematics, gives the distance of the lightning much more exactly than the old process of counting seconds between the flash and the thunder.

Don't wait for time to heal that itching rash

NEGLECT of even the slightest skin rash, roughness, chafing or soreness may have serious consequences. Painful, disfiguring complaints like eczema, ringworm, etc., all start in a small way.

The safest plan is to keep a jar of Resinol Ointment ready to use at the first sign of skin trouble. It promptly stops itching and reduces inflammation and burning. The tiny pores readily receive this soothing ointment, and its healing influence is carried far below the surface of the skin.

Fish—I wish those fishermen wouldn't send down such stingy looking bait!

DELIGHTFUL DANCE

She—I adore dancing. The piece they're playing now is delightful.

He—Perfectly delightful. May I have the pleasure?

She—Certainly. There's a charming seat under those palms—let's get it quick!

IS NOTHING LACKING?

"This hash is lacking in something, I'm sure."

"Hardly, sir—we put into it everything we could find."

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

TACTLESSNESS

THE very day of Mrs. Jones' dinner party, Mercy and Percy Lord heard of Edward Jones' divorce from his wife.

"Dinner is to come off just the same," said Percy, "but for heaven's sake, Mercy, don't bring up the subject of Edward."

A few hours later the Lords arrived at the Jones house. "Good evening," said Mercy to her hostess, "how is Edward?"

It was always like that; she always said just what she hadn't meant to say. Outside she carried it off smiling, but inside she was "full of dead men's bones."

At last they went in to the table, and Mercy drew a deep breath and fixed her attention firmly on the things she must not talk about. She must not mention politics or religion in a general gathering. Then, "How shall you vote?" she heard herself asking her dinner partner; and remembered too late Percy's saying that that was the unforgiveable direct question to a man. "My husband is a Republican," she hastened to add as her neighbor declared himself a Democrat.

So it went from bad to worse. The climax came when, growing more and more rattled, she took up her knife and fork to deal with fried chicken, and, before she knew it, sent her sidebone sailing down the table square at the guests two seats beyond her. "Catch it on the wing," cried that lady rescuing the escaped bird; and Mercy, when everybody laughed instead of looking embarrassed, wondered why she could never turn an awkward situation into a joke.

As they left the Jones', Mercy heard one man say to another, "If Mercy Lord were my wife, I'd send her to a sanitarium." Percy, as was his custom, looked sad and said nothing.

But that stray remark set Mercy thinking; and one day she went to see the great Doctor Williams, who was a family friend. After he had heard her out and asked several leading questions, Doctor Williams said:

"You're obsessed with the idea of what you mustn't do. Loosen up—stop struggling to avoid imagined social dangers—think of what people like instead of what they don't like—"

Your Last Name

IS IT HACKETT?

HACKETT is found in England as well as in this country and as an English surname it is undoubtedly a corruption of Harcourt, a French town. Thus the first to be called Hackett in England may have been a resident of Harcourt, France.

But the founder of the Hackett family here was not of English or French origin. He was native of Holland and came to this country over a hundred and twenty-five years ago. He married a daughter of Rev. Abraham Keteltas, a New York clergyman. Their son was James Henry Hackett, born in New York in 1800. After graduating from Columbia college he married Katherine Sugg, an actress, and for several years led a successful career as a merchant. Financial reverses came, however, and at his wife's suggestion he went on the stage. Both he and Mrs. Hackett acted successfully for many years. Their son was James Keteltas Hackett, born in 1869, whose middle name was that of his paternal grandmother.

Button—One very good authority says that this is a form of Bouton, meaning boot. Others say that the surname Button is derived through mispronunciation from Burton or Butterton, places in England.

Bowles—This name, it is agreed, is derived from Bouelles, a place in Normandy. One of the early members of the family wrote his name Hugh de Boeles.

Champness—This name, which has the variation Champneys, found in this country and England, is derived from Champaigne and indicated one who came from that section of France.

The Appleton Family

Mr. Lysander John Appleton
Mrs. Lysander John Appleton
Miss Daysey Mayme Appleton
Master Chauncey Devere Appleton

MRS. LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON discovers many things that puzzle the physicians. "I bent over too far in stretching the carpet," she will say; or "I reached up too high in cleaning a pantry shelf, and something in me snapped, and I haven't been well since." Something is always snapping like this, according to Mrs. Appleton, leaving the impression that her insides are always snapping like firecrackers.

Lysander John Appleton once believed that if he bought enough rockers, he wouldn't have to give up his when company came, but though he filled the house, he still hasn't enough. He abandoned that ambition and is now trying to get so many beds in the house that he will not have to sleep on the parlor lounge when company comes. This ambition is the only one Lysander John Appleton has left.

Mrs. Lysander John Appleton talks a great deal to callers about her ailments. It is related that the preacher called once to ask about her husband's soul, and all he could find out from Mrs. Appleton was the condition of her liver.

It has never dawned upon his mother and sister that the reason Chauncey Devere Appleton always pulls out the chair that has a weak leg, and breaks it down before company, is that he isn't allowed in the parlor often enough to become acquainted with its short-comings and infirmities.

Though a great deal of money has been spent on Daysey Mayme's voice, she can't throw it farther than a block in calling Chauncey Devere home in the evenings, while a girl who lives next door, and who knows nothing about scales except the kind found on a fish, can throw her voice six blocks.

THE DAYS RIGHT AFTER

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN they had come away from her and left her in her house alone,
When there was nothing more to do but cut his name upon the stone,
I thought how cruel kindness is, how selfish all our sympathy,
When they had come away from her
and left her all alone to be.

When he was there, and in the house,
however pale, however dumb,
When still his earthly form she had,
then it was good of us to come.
But, oh, the days right after! then I think they need us even more Than when the shades shut out the sun and when the crepe is on the door.

Let's never get our kindness done,
let's never let our comfort end,
As long as sorrow needs our love, as long as trouble needs a friend.
Let us remember, in the time of loss
and loneliness and care,
The days right after always are the hardest days of all to bear.

SCHOOL DAYS

MY GOSH! ARE YOU CRAZY? YOU WALKED RIGHT SMACK UNDER THAT LADDER! AIN'T YOU GOT A LICK O' SENSE?
I WOULDN'T BE IN YOUR SHOES FOR A MILLION DOLLARS!
I KNOW IT. I DONE IT ON PURPOSE. I TURNED OVER A NEW LEAF ON NEW YEARS DAY AND I AIN'T BELIEVIN' IN NO LUCK SIGNS OF ANY KIND WHATSOEVER. YESTERDAY I STEPT RIGHT OVER A HORSE SHOE AND INSIDE AN HOUR I FOUND A NICKEL!

FAMILY FOOD

THIS is the season when deer is served in some parts of the country. Those fortunate enough to have a portion of venison will appreciate a few ways of cooking it.

When broiling venison, follow the recipe for broiled beefsteak and serve rare, with:

Maitre d'Hotel Butter.

Put one-fourth of a cupful of butter in a bowl and work it with a wooden spoon until creamy. Add salt, one-half teaspoonful; one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley and three-fourths of a tablespoonful of lemon juice added very slowly.

Venison Steaks.

Cut venison steaks in circular pieces and use the trimmings for making stock. Saute the steaks in a hot frying pan well buttered and serve with:

Cumberland Sauce.

Soak two tablespoonfuls of citron cut into julienne-shaped pieces, two tablespoonfuls of glaced cherries, one tablespoonful of sultana cherries in orange juice to cover for several hours. Drain and cook the fruit in one-third of a cupful of any good canned fruit juice, add one-half tumbler of currant jelly and the orange juice, after cooking five minutes. Add one and one-third cupfuls of brown sauce and two tablespoonfuls of shredded almonds.

Venison Steak With Chestnut Sauce.

Wipe a steak, sprinkle with salt and pepper after broiling on a greased broiler five minutes. Remove to a hot platter and pour over it this sauce:

Chestnut Sauce.

Fry one-half an onion and six slices of carrots cut into small pieces in two tablespoonfuls of butter five minutes. Add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well browned; then add one and one-half cupfuls of brown stock, a sprig of parsley, a bit of bayleaf, eight peppercorns and one teaspoonful of salt. Simmer twenty minutes, strain, then add three tablespoonfuls of currant jelly, one cupful of boiled French chestnuts and one tablespoonful of butter.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE No. 4

"THE RAGGED EDGE"

Watch out for this one; it looks easy, but it has a few combinations that are stickers. There are no technical words, but you'd better brush up on your geography. By the way, if you have a baby boy to name you might get a few suggestions from this. Notice the all-over interlock.

DOGS ON AUTOMOBILES

The Oregon Humane Society is sending out to the newspapers in all the states copy of the following bill to require protection of dogs carried on automobiles. Here is the full text of the law:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to carry a dog upon the hood, fender, running board or other external part of any automobile or truck, unless the same shall be protected by a frame work, carrier, or other device sufficient to keep any such animal from falling from the said automobile.

Section 2. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 3. Justices of the Peace, district courts, county courts and all other courts having jurisdiction as justices of the peace, shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts of all prosecutions under this act.

WHALING FAMILY ENJOY HAPPY CELEBRATION IN ANGEL CITY

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Whaling and family, of 4811 Cape May avenue, have returned from Los Angeles, where they attended the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Riley, of 157 West Thirty-ninth street. Mrs. Riley is a sister of Mr. Whaling. There were fifty-six guests present, forty-five of them being members of the family. A very elaborate dinner was served and the room was beautifully decorated in pink and white. Music and dancing were enjoyed by all. During the happy celebration, Mrs. M. Morrison,, who is ninety-one years of age and is an aunt of Mrs. Riley and Mr. Whaling, added unusual gayety to the occasion by dancing a lively jig. The exceptional family reunion was also most pleasantly marked by the attendance of three relatives from Chicago, who happened to be touring the Pacific coast and extended their visit in order to be present at the unique celebration. Mr. and Mrs. Riley were the recipients of many pretty and appropriate presents.

WINIFRED DAVIDSON OUR GIFTED AUTHORESS HIGHLY HONORED

Distinguished among a selected list of some sixty international poets in "Poetry of Today," a supplement to the Poetry of Review, published by Erskine MacDonald, London, are three San Diegans, including our highly esteemed Winifred Davidson, whose contribution consists of a beautiful poem entitled "Rain." It is acknowledged to be a poem delightfully descriptive of Point Loma, where the gifted authoress has resided for several years. Mrs. Davidson is the popular and talented writer of the excellent "Loma Lore" series, published continously in "The Beach News" and she is also an admirable contributor of some splendid verse relating to Point Loma. Greatly to her credit, it has been stated that her wonderful poem, "The Hosts—Spring in California," published in 1922, was one of the most widely copied poems of that period. Mrs. Davidson is quite a prominent member of the San Diego Writers' Club, and is an honored past president of the American Literary Society.

OCEAN BEACH

SONG OF AN ILLINOIS TOURIST

By Mrs. Chris Krieg, Leroy, Ill.

Oh, take me back to the dear old state,
That seems so far away from me;
The one that lies so many miles,
Beside the long rolling sea!

To where the fruit is choice and rare,
And flowers their fragrance sheds;
Rose clusters in the sun's warm glare,
And stately palm trees lift their heads.

Oh, take me back to this land of dreams,
That lies 'neath azure skies;
Where the dreams are not merely fancy themes,
But may gladly materialize.

In Southern California's clime,
There let me have my home;
None e'er could tempt this soul of mine
From thence to ever roam.

I love her rugged hills,
That giant forests crown;
Her fertile vales with vineyards clad,
Or fields of grain are grown.

Of all California's wealth,,
The half has not been told;
Its mountain rills of booming health,
Surpasses all her veins of gold.

In Ocean Beach close to the shore,
I would have this home of mine;
White crested waves roll to my door,
With murmuring music, sweet, sublime.

On a clift by the grand old ocean,
I can spend hour after hour;
Nothing else on earth that speaks so clear,
Of the Great Creator's power.

BURNS' NIGHT HELD IN PACIFIC BEACH

Sons and daughters from the land of Burns were in full possession of Pacific Beach last Saturday evening. The skirl of the bagpipes, the songs of "Auld Lang Syne" and the many other diversions that makes "Burns Nicht" dear to Scotchmen were heard and seen in the clubhouse.

A sumptuous supper was enjoyed by upwards of one hundred Scots and their friends, and the evening was replete with delightful entertainment.

CHILDREN'S SPRING FROCKS; SIMPLICITY MARKS FOOTWEAR

FOR little tots and for girls of the intermediate ages—from seven to fourteen—stylists who specialize in designing their frocks have already presented many spring models. These include practical day dresses, and also party frocks, all in gay colors and made of various materials. These materials are already in the hands of merchants, so that the spring outfitting of little folks may be undertaken at once and be out of the way by the time Mr. Robin announces the coming of warm days meant for outdooring.

Pretty Linen Frock.

The main style points, accented by the new arrivals, may be summed up briefly as colorful materials, round neck lines, straight silhouette, low waistline, indicated by girdles of ribbon, self material or leather belts (according to the character of the frock), and novel decorations. All these are features of importance in frocks for girls from seven to fourteen. In materials, linens, cottons, rayon materials striped and plain; also pongee in plain and striped patterns, and crepe de chine, plain, striped and figured, with wool challies, account for a great many of the new dresses. Pipings and tiny buttons in bright contrasting colors add vivacity to the plain materials when they are not themselves high-colored.

For the scrawny little girl, inverted plaits, introduced at each side, so that they are not noticeable, the raglan or kimono sleeve, tucks and other expedients are employed, to furnish grace of line. Needlework is, as always, an important decorative feature on children's clothes, and it appears in simple, sketchy designs. It is this simple stitchery that adorns the pretty linen frock pictured, which one can imagine in any of the bright shades of blue, green, red or yellow that are displayed, and stitched with white or a contrasting color. Red is very well represented in the new collection and much is made of natural pongee, piped with red and finished off with tiny red buttons. The coarser rayon materials are liked for tailored frocks and striped crepe de chine for the better wash dresses.

Women, and particularly American women, have grown very fastidious about their footwear—they demand more in the way of decorative value in their shoes and hose than ever before—at least in modern times. Some of the ancients clothed their feet magnificently—which ought to put us moderns above reproach—even when facetious male relations accuse us of wearing millinery on our feet.

But there has been a reaction, away from the more fanciful styles in footwear for daytime, toward simple lines. This is in keeping with the vogue for simplicity in garments. Fashionable shoes for daytime wear are generally made of kid, in brown or black, and are plainer finish than those of last season. For afternoon nothing is more elegant than brown kid with long vamp and high heel having for ornament only a plaited leather fastening. But the ensemble costume is perfected by shoes to match in color, as gray, beige, tan, brown or black shoes and stockings, with frocks in these colors. A pretty pair of gray kid shoes for afternoon wear is shown at the left of the group pictured here. It reveals the approved high arch, the graceful heel and toe treatment in fashionable footwear of this character.

For street wear the bow tie has reappeared on brown and black kid shoes. A serviceable slipper appears in the picture with a flat bow of grosgrain ribbon for ornament. It has a medium length vamp and semi-high heel and is very soft and comfortable. It is in kid shoes that we may achieve stylish as well as comfortable footwear. A substantial kid shoe is shown also with two-strap fastening and medium low heel—nothing is better for service than this model with its trim lines and graceful shaping. Ornaments for varying daytime models are usually made of kid, in square, circular or oval shapes of either plain or plaited leather.

Some Styles in Footwear.

Evening shoes are quite another story. Here we may be truthfully accused of emulating the ancients, since there is a fad for jeweled heels, brilliant ornaments and rich materials. White kid opera pumps are shown with a band of tiny rhinestones defining all edges. Others display rhinestone buckles edged with ostrich to match the evening gown in color.

USE JAVELLE WATER TO REMOVE STAINS

Should Be Applied Only to Uncolored Cotton.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Javelle water has long been prepared and used in the household to take out various stains. In Farmers' Bulletin 861, "Removal of Stains from Clothing," javelle water is suggested as a possible agent for treating stains made by coffee, certain dyes that have run, fruit, a few medicines, mildew, tea, tobacco, tomato vines, and black walnut. Javelle water is prepared as follows, according to the United States Department of Agriculture:

Dissolve one pound of washing soda in one quart of cold water. To this solution add one-fourth of ordinary bleaching powder (calcium hypochlorite). Filter this liquid through a piece of muslin to remove the sediment which remains. Keep the clear liquid in tightly stoppered bottle for use. Javelle water may be used successfully in removing a number of stains, but should be applied only to uncolored cotton or linen materials, since it bleaches colors and rots silk or wool. In treating stains with javelle water, stretch the stained portion over a bowl filled with water and apply the javelle water to the stain with a medicine dropper. Do not allow the javelle water to remain in contact with the stain for more than one minute, and rinse it out thoroughly.

Taking Out Stains With Javelle Water.

Scissors Are Valuable Help in Kitchen Work

Medium-sized scissors hanging in a convenient place in the kitchen are a valuable help. Here are some of the purposes for which they will be found useful, according to the United States Department of Agriculture:

For cutting cold meat into cubes.

For cutting celery or green peppers into small pieces for pickles or salads.

For shredding cabbage or lettuce.

For cutting up raisins or dates.

For cutting out the center membrane of a grapefruit in preparing it for the table.

For cutting out the woody core and eyes of fresh pineapple.

After the scissors are used each time they should be carefully washed and dried.

Braised Veal

Braising is a combination of stewing and roasting. The surface of the meat is usually seared in hot fat, then placed in a casserole or other baking dish with a cover, seasonings, including vegetables, if liked, and a little water are added and the whole cooked slowly in the oven. Such cuts of veal as the shoulder, the breast, the fore shank, the flank (rolled), and even the neck are suited to this method, states the United States Department of Agriculture.

PREPARING MEAT FOR DRIED BEEF SUPPLY

Good Plan to Preserve Part of Lean Portion.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Where there are large quantities of beef on hand, as when beef cattle are slaughtered on the farm, it is a good plan to preserve part of the lean meat by corning and drying it.

The round is commonly used for dried beef, the inside of the thigh being considered the choicest piece, as it is slightly more tender. The round should be cut lengthwise of the grain of the meat in preparing for dried beef, so that the muscle fibers may be cut crosswise when the dried beef is sliced for table use.

Cure the meat by corning it, as follows: Weigh the meat and for each 100 pounds allow eight pounds of salt; sprinkle a layer of salt one-quarter of an inch in depth over the bottom of the vessel (a stone jar or wooden barrel which has been thoroughly cleaned and scoured is preferable); pack the cuts of meat as closely as possible making a layer five or six inches thick; then add alternate layers of salt and meat, being careful to cover the top layer of meat with considerable salt.

Allow the salted meat to stand overnight, then add a solution composed of ingredients in the following proportion: For 100 pounds of meat use five pounds of sugar, two ounces of baking soda, and four ounces of saltpeter dissolved in one gallon of lukewarm water. Mix thoroughly and pour over the meat. Then add three gallons of water. Keep the meat entirely under the brine by using a loose board cover with a weight on it. If any of the meat projects it is apt to cause spoilage.

After being removed from the pickle, the meat should be smoked and hung in a dry place or near the kitchen fire, where the water will evaporate from it. It may be used at any time after smoking, although the longer it hangs in the dry atmosphere the drier it will become. The drier the climate, in general, the more easily can meats be dried. In arid regions good dried meat can be made by exposing it fresh (if protected from flies) to the air.

Pickled and cured meats are smoked to aid in their preservation and to give flavor and palatability. The creosote formed by the burning of wood closes the meat pores to some extent, excluding the air, and is somewhat objectionable to insects. Directions for smoking meats are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1415, Beef on the Farm, which may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture while the supply lasts.

Pastry Paste Useful to Make Delicious Cookies

Plain pastry paste or pie trimming makes excellent cookies when cut in fancy shapes and decorated, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A thick coating of ground almonds pressed into the paste before cooking makes a particularly good "almond straw." Pie trimming in tiny rounds cut with a small-sized baking powder can may be converted into delicious little tea cakes if brushed with egg yolk and sprinkled with granulated sugar, nuts and small bits of candied fruits before baking. Cinnamon may also be used on the tops. Goodies like these may be easily prepared without encroaching too far on the busy homemaker's time.

Renovate Waxed Floors

A soiled waxed floor can be easily renovated, says the United States Department of Agriculture. If it is not in bad condition, rubbing with a cloth saturated with turpentine or gasoline will brighten it so that a fresh coat of wax may be applied. If necessary, however, the old coating of wax and dirt may be entirely removed by rubbing first with No. 1 steel wool dipped in turpentine and then with a soft cloth, after which the floor may be refinished with varnish or wax.

FARM GIRLS LEARNING TO USE PATTERNS

Home Demonstration Agent Showing Girls How to Use Dress Patterns.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Girls enjoy sewing together as much as older women do. The girls in the picture belong to a home demonstration club in Columbus county, N. C., conducted as a part of the extension work for farm women and girls. The home demonstration agent is showing them how to use a pattern. In connection with clothing construction and selection, these girls learn how to cut and fit simple garments, how to put them together, what fabrics and colors to choose and how to make over some of their old clothes. The plan for this sewing work also includes the making of furnishings for the girls' own bedrooms or for the dining room. A report received by the United States Department of Agriculture states that last year 200 girls enrolled for clothing work in Columbus county. Of these, 176 completed their work, making 362 finished garments valued at $886. They also interested 170 homes in clothing improvement, in addition to their own.

Health and good looks
—the reward of internal cleanliness.

IF YOU do not keep clean internally your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks and insomnia, each of which saps your health and vitality.

Avoid Laxatives—say Doctors

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

ENGINEER AND THE PILOT

By NATHANIEL DICKINSON

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

PATTERSON leaned out over the low rail of the gangway-port and surveyed the river above. It was black, as black as the grime on the engineer's hands, as the frown on his dark face and the mood which caused it whenever the picture of the dapper young pilot, in his natty blue uniform and black-visored cap, on the upper deck, passed before his mind and stirred afresh the hate which lay smoldering in the depths of his soul.

There was something soothing, then, in the very anger of the elements to the engineer of the Sayville. The startling, vivid whiteness of the white-caps which here and there showed their teeth against the black-green of the river, the dull glow of red, half-way up the northern horizon, which marked the track of the coming storm, were all akin to his mood, and strangely comforting.

"We'll get it," he prophesied gloomily to himself, "and it looks like hell-fire," he vagarized.

For Patterson was in love, and only this morning he had discovered the full metes and bounds of this passion and the other great one—hate. For the one he was indebted to a certain girl whom he had known but a month; for the other to the young pilot of the Sayville, whom he had known for years.

That it was all his own doing, this present condition of affairs, did not tend to ease his hate, or his love. Two weeks ago he and Bolton, the pilot, had been friends, and harmony reigned between the engine-room and the pilot house. Then, in a moment of that foolish confidence which lovers have, he had taken the pilot to call on the girl he was to marry, and this had been the beginning of the end as far as the rough engineer was concerned, for the pilot's hands were not grimy, and his voice was low and pleasant, and then, too, conscience and love are sworn enemies, and the girl was not without her charms. So, from a friend of both, the pilot became a friend of each, which is vastly different in such cases, and a coolness grew between him and Patterson.

But Patterson's pride was of a nature which kept him silent, and in silence the coolness grew between him and the girl he loved and his old friend, Bolton. And then, this very morning, had come the inevitable. When he had gone to say good-by to his promised wife, he found her in the little garden he had grown so to care for, in the arms of another man—Bolton.

Something had seemed to snap in him then, for he had stopped in his tracks with an expression almost of horror in his eyes. He was too dazed to be angry then.

The girl had sprung from the arms of her new lover with a cry of alarm, and he stood ready to fight for his very life with the man he had wronged, for there was that in the other's eyes which was not good to see.

But the big engineer had slowly passed his huge hand across his eyes, turned and walked out the gate and down the street again. There was something terrible in this—more so than if he had vented his rage then and there.

Now, the cloud had passed from Patterson's brain and left him with one clear thought, and that the desire to kill. Beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead.

The jingle of bells in the engine-room called him back to the present and his past. He cast a last look at the black thunderstorm, and went back to his engine as though he had said a last good-by to this world.

* * * * * * * *

When the Sayville cast off her moorings at six o'clock and swung away from her dock, the rising storm had already brought night down over the river, and the dull red in the north had faded in the approaching rain.

Up in the pilot house they had called for full speed in spite of the narrow channel, in the hope that the steamer might run away from the storm. But they were in its track, and but a few miles down-stream it overtook the Sayville and swept her decks from stem to stern with a deluge of driving rain.

Down among his throttles and levers Patterson received the signal to slow down to half-speed. For a moment he stood motionless, hesitating whether or not to obey the signal and then, his reason coming back to him in a measure, he slowed his engine down.

But a thought came to him that there was a place on the river, where, if he had hesitated, it might have meant the death of those in the pilot house, and this was at the draw-bridge which spanned the river five miles below at Middleburgh.

The draw-men on this and the crew of the steamer were sworn enemies. Time after time the draw had been swung so tardily that the Sayville had to back at full speed to save crashing into it. Once, even, the steamer's forward deck had swept under the slowly swinging draw, and for a fascinating minute the huge structure had hung before the scared faces of those in her pilot house as her reversed engines held her and then slowly backed her away from danger.

This incident had cost one draw-man his position, but another as inimical had come, and the feud waxed stronger, until of late it had come to be the custom rather than the exception for the Sayville to have to back her engines on entering the narrow channel between the island above the bridge, and the left bank, before the slowly opening draw.

This Patterson knew and counted on in his plan for revenge, and waited all too impatiently for the time to come when he should know by the signals that they were approaching the bridge. What mattered it to him that he was imperiling the lives of two hundred passengers and officers and crew of the steamer? He had but the thought for one thing, and that was the death of the pilot.

* * * * * * * *

In the pilot house all was dark but for the shaded binnacle light. Bolton stood at the wheel. At his right hand was the mate, at his left, one of the quartermasters. Far down the river, the lights on the drawbridge twinkled red and green and white in the dark night.

But now the rain had ceased, and the thunder rumbled in the distance. The river lay black velvet through which the steamer softly crowded her way. Yet the banks were distinguishable now, for the channel had narrowed between the island, in the center of the stream at this place, and the left bank of the river.

The lights on the bridge grew, and out of the night its huge framework took form like some Titan net spread to catch the steamer. They were but a hundred yards from it now. "Give her the whistle," ordered the pilot and the quartermaster pulled the cord and sent a hoarse blast out over the river.

But the lights on the bridge did not change. A bar of light from the steamer's searchlight threw the dripping structure into sudden daylight, and played along the draw, searching each nick and corner with its brilliant rays and sending a path of light down the dark river beyond. Then and only then the men on the draw tardily started to swing it.

The mate swore volubly, for the current ran strong here and even at half-speed the steamer was sweeping down on the draw at the rate of some ten knots.

"Stop her and back her!" he ordered abruptly. Bolton gave the signals, and all three waited expectantly, anxiously. The vibration of the engines ceased, and for a moment the big river boat glided on in stately silence.

And then, with the structure of the bridge towering but the steamer's own length before it, came the vibrations again, and the Sayville seemed fairly to leap forward, with her engines running at full speed ahead!

For a moment the men in the pilot house were startled out of speech and action and then, with an inarticulate cry, the mate snatched the bell-cord from the pilot's hand and pulled it furiously. But still the engines pounded ahead at full speed. The steamer's forward deck swept under the draw, which had swung but a few feet, and the towering mass of the bridge loomed before the pilot house. "Hell!" cried the mate and, his courage deserting him, he flung the pilot-house door open and sprang out, the quartermaster close on his heels.

Bolton, alone, stood at his post. Whatever else his faults, he had the courage which makes heroes. He knew now. It came to him all in a moment—Patterson's treachery and its cause. In a way, he told himself, he was responsible for the lives of the passengers, of the officers and crew of this boat, for had it not been for him, all this would not have happened. And yet, as he faced death, a last wistful thought of what might have been came to him as the face of the girl passed before his mind's eye in that kaleidoscope of impending dissolution which comes at such a time.

For a moment he stood thus, and then it seemed to him that the mass before him was hurled at his head. He ducked, instinctively. Then came a rending crash, a shudder ran through the steamer, and he was hurled to the deck. As he lay half-stunned he saw the dark mass of the bridge sweep over him, saw the deckhouse swept before it like paper, and the big funnels bend and crash to the deck below, and then he saw that the black sky was above him again, and realized that he was still clinging to the wheel, and this, with its strong bracing, had protected him from the deckhouse, which had gone to pieces on it. He put it hard over and headed the wreck for the soft bank.

* * * * * * * *

So Patterson, the engineer, did not gain his wish after all. But that was Bolton's last trick at the wheel. His life had been spared, but his nerve had gone forever.

Down in the engine-room they found a raving maniac where once had been the best engineer on the river.

And the third actor in this tragedy—the girl who was to marry each in turn? She is the wife of another.

A Man Shopping

A citizen who was doing some shopping had his wife along with him and she was evidently enjoying the situation. With lack-luster eye he wandered from counter to counter. He didn't know what he wanted and didn't know how to ask for it. In desperation he finally stopped before a counter and made a nose dive into the crowd, coming out gasping.

"Did you get what you wanted?" asked his wife sweetly.

"Get what I wanted?" was his irate retort. "I didn't even get what I reached for."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BOBBED HAIR STOWAWAY DONS SAILOR'S GARB

Smuggled Aboard U. S. Freighter in Holland to Wed Ship's Cook.

New Orleans, La.—When Cornelia Vander Wheel, slender bobbed-haired blonde barmaid of Rotterdam, stowed away on the United States shipping board freighter West Ira, she and her lover failed to reckon with the energetic customs inspectors in New Orleans.

The customs inspectors found the feminine stowaway—and identified her despite her attire of male garments—and sent her to the immigration station. Notwithstanding the protests of P. W. Adams, chief cook of the steamship, that he wanted to marry her, the officials indicated they would send the girl back to Holland.

When Adams was in Rotterdam, he met and fell in love with the blonde girl. They wanted to get married, he said, but he did not have his birth certificate and there were other delays. So they decided they would come to America to be married.

Smuggled Girl Aboardship.

The girl donned men's clothing. Her blond hair was stuffed beneath a cap, and rough seamen's attire and heavy boots completed the attire. Under cover of night, she was smuggled into the cabin of Chief Cook Adams. Soon the voyage was started.

A day or two ago the West Ira slowly moved up the river here and to the side of the dock. Inspectors Abbot and Sabrio began their systematic search for liquor. They came to the cook's cabin. It was locked. Adams was ordered to unlock the door.

Busily Washing Dishes.

Scarcely had he turned the key in the lock when a hurrying form flashed past the inspectors. They searched the cabin but found no liquor.

In the belief that "the man" who had run from the cook's cabin had liquor concealed on "his" person, the inspectors decided to question "him." "He" was found in the galley, busily washing dishes.

As they approached, the churning of the dish water became more violent. The inspectors peered under the rim of the cap, pulled down low, so as to almost conceal the eyes. The secret was out.

Before Captain Rosamond, the girl and Adams told their story. They insisted that neither the captain nor any member of the crew had guilty knowledge of the plot.

Fervid Pleas Are Vain.

"We want to be married," said Adams. "Please don't send the girl back to Rotterdam. I'm an American, from Maine, and she'll be a citizen when we are married."

But the inspectors ordered them to go to the immigrant station.

The "man" disappeared inside the cabin, but now as a young woman. She wore a dark blue skirt, a light blue waist. Her hair was flung back from her head, revealing bright blue eyes and a light complexion. Apparently she is about twenty-two years old.

At the immigration station, officials voiced the possibility that Adams may be charged with attempting to smuggle an alien into the United States.

Grandson of Historian Offers Himself as Slave

Boston.—An advertisement headed "Slave," which appeared in newspapers under the head "Situations Wanted," led to discovery that Cuvier Grover Flint, a grandson of John Fiske, the historian, and son of Grover Flint, author, was the subject.

"Male, twenty-four, (white) sound, intelligent, gentle; belonged to aristocratic family; lease by the year, $1,000," the advertisement read in part.

In the shadow of Harvard college, where his father was graduated and to which he was to have gone until the World war took him to France, young Flint said he spent $15,000 last year, but would be glad to hire himself out, by lease or otherwise, for $1,000 next year. Depending on an aunt, whose estate he managed, to leave him her fortune, he learned after her death that it was willed to a cousin, he said.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

THE CHINA BOY

There he always stood in the kitchen—that little china boy.

This Little Girl Loved the China Boy.

Perhaps it would be more correct to say that he hung in the kitchen. For a nail kept him safely upon the wall, looking down over the kitchen stove.

He wore a big yellow hat—a hat such as fine old gentlemen wore many years ago.

It was of a nice yellow shade.

His suit was of blue, and around his neck was a white ruffled collar.

He wore white socks and little bright-red shoes. And he sat upon a pale-yellow basket.

He sat in the center and on either side were places for matches.

On one side were matches which had been used, and on the other side were matches which had never been used, but which would be taken for lighting the stove.

And all of him was china. His shoes and his ruffled collar and his suit and his hat and his face and the basket upon which he sat were all made of china.

He had been in the family for many, many years. But he still was only a little boy.

Of course he was only china and so he never grew up. He had seen others grow up.

There had been the little girl, Dolly. She had grown up and was a lady now and there was another little girl who called Dolly "mother."

This little girl loved the china boy as Dolly had loved him. He had always been a favorite.

And why wouldn't he be a favorite? He was just as pleasant and friendly a little china boy as ever you'd hope to see.

He had a most delightful expression which was something between a smile and a look of friendliness.

Perhaps it was a mixture of both.

Then he had seen other little boys and girls grow up. The boys had big deep voices now. And they talked of things which he could not understand at all.

They talked of "business" and "the store" and "the office" and whether "business was good" or whether "business was not so good."

Splendid things about which to talk the little china boy thought, only he could not understand them very well.

Still, it made no difference. No one expected him to understand. They did not seem to think any the less of him because he could not understand.

And when the children talked about arithmetic and spelling they did not seem to think he was stupid because he couldn't spell and because he couldn't do sums.

All his little china life he had heard about sums and spelling and lessons and business, but none of all that could he understand.

He knew that he was very contented in his little basket seat upon the wall.

He knew that when the match was struck and the fire lighted good things were made upon the stove.

Pleasant odors of good things to eat came up to his little china nostrils.

But that was what he cared about—the odors. He did not need food.

The little red cheeks he had would not become pale because he did not eat.

He Had a Beautiful Bath.

No, they would stay as bright as ever. He did not need food.

Once in a while he had a beautiful bath, for the smoke and the dirt from the stove had a habit of coming up and settling upon him as though he were their home!

But after a bath how shiny and lovely he did look. His clothes never became shabby.

He had worn the same suit for many, many, many years, but there were no patches upon it and it still looked as fresh and nice as ever.

Often the different members of the family praised him.

"What a comfort he is," they would say. "We always know where to get matches."

And the little china boy looked at them in his pleased china fashion.

Listens Only to Fools

A man complained bitterly of the conduct of his son. He related at length to an old friend all the young man's escapades.

"You should speak to him with firmness and recall him to his duty," said the friend.

"But he pays not the least attention to what I say. He listens only to the advice of fools. I wish you would talk to him."

324 Paul Ave., Belleville, Ill.

WHEN you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanlac will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the Earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.

When you know it has worked wonders for so many folks it's folly not to take advantage of Tanlac's help yourself. Don't put it off another day. Get a bottle at your druggist's now and start the good work right away.

Cost of Candy

In the year 1923 the people of the United States spent nearly $300,000,000 for candy, an average of more than $1,000,000 a day. Assuming an average price of 40 cents a pound for all grades, this amount of money would purchase nearly 1,000,000,000 pounds of candy in a year.—Lydia J. Roberts in Hygeia.

LEGISLATIVE LETTER

By C. W. TURNER

Sacramento.—The legislature has adjourned for the thirty-day period provided by the constitution and will meet again at the end of February. It is the hope of Speaker Merriam that it will then be possible to get through with the business within the succeeding six weeks and adjourn sine die about the first week in April. That is Merriam's hope, but it is a hope which very few of his colleagues expect to see realized.

In the first place we have more bills introduced than usual, and that of course means more business to transact. Then again there are a number of subjects which are likely to create long, drawn-out debates, and finally there is always the possibility of new business or new events to delay adjournment.

The budget seems to meet with unanimous approval, and insofar as it is possible to look into the future, it will be adopted practically as submitted by the governor. As originally submitted it did not include in the main budget the appropriations for the so-called self-sustaining departments. But those have been added and they form the only subject of discussion.

Originally it was the plan of the governor to turn into the state treasury all surplus derived from moneys collected by those departments, but the supreme court has held that this cannot be done. The result is that there will be a large surplus in the different funds whcih must remain unless gotten rid of in some other way. There is an unanimity of opinion that a large surplus should not be allowed to accumulate, but there is a difference of opinion as to how that should be avoided. One way is to reduce the various fees and charges which create the surplus and the other is to take steps to remove the constitutional objection to turning the money into the treasury.

Some idea of what the surplus will be and from where derived may be gained by a few quotations from the estimates of receipts and expenditures in the several departments for the coming two years:

The banking department is expected to take in $581,882 and to spend $412,520. The fish and game commission will have a revenue of $1,650,462 and should spend $1,253,899. The real estate commission will do even better in the matter of surplus with a revenue of $933,727 and expenditures of $285,855, but best of all, the corporation commission will probably take in $1,549,240 and spend only $444,593.

The question arises as to the advisability of reducing the fees in any of those departments if they are not excessive, and whether it would not be better to continue the present schedule of fees and turn the surplus money—estimated at $4,000,000—into the treasury for some useful purpose? This is the question which the solons will be asked to decide when they return from their recess and upon which they are supposed to consult their constituents in the meantime.

Among the bills introduced is one by Assemblyman Dodge of Los Angeles which proposes to prohibit candidates from securing more than one party nomination. Dodge says it is absurd that a man should be the candidate of parties so far apart as the Republicans and Socialists.

Another measure proposes that when a judge from one of the smaller counties sits as a substitute judge in any of the larger cities he shall, during the period that he occupies the city bench receive the same salary as the city judge. It frequently happens that a judge from one of the small counties sits for months in a city court and draws only his country judge's salary, though he is performing all the duties of his city brother, and has the extra expense of being away from home.

Another effort to establish a state institution in southern California, so that the south will be a fully equipped state if division should ever come, proposes a second state fair at Riverside. The board of control, however, opposes the scheme of a southern penitentiary.

San Francisco wants the control of its water front and the ferry building and that means a long and hard fight, whether it gets the prize or not. It represents too much patronage to be allowed to slip easily out of the grasp of the state.

A bill providing for the licensing of credit unions in the state of California has been introduced by J. J. Hollister of Santa Barbara and Ed Sample of San Diego. The credit unions would be placed under the supervision of the state building and loan commissioner.

An emergency bill bearing the approval of the board of control and the governor, asks for an appropriation of $292,283 to reimburse the department of agriculture for money spent in combating the hoof and mouth disease.

Membership of the pharmacy board would be reduced from seven to five under a bill in the senate. All members to be licensed pharmacists.

A senate joint resolution asking congress to investigate the mud flow on Mount Shasta, was passed.

An additional $15,000 appropriation from the reclamation fund to carry on the investigation of the so-called salt water problem in the Sacramento river-San Joaquin river delta region in California, to be met by a like sum from California interests, has been requested of Secretary Work by Senator Shortridge.

Adjutant General R. E. Mittlestaedt has announced the appointment of Davis W. Gooch of Sacramento as auditor of the adjutant general's office, to succeed Howard McIntyre, who held the position for twenty years.

The senate passed a joint resolution sent in from the assembly calling on Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to make public the opinion of the attorney general on the manner in which income tax payments should be made.

Forty-two per cent of the farmers in the United States blame their financial difficulties on the low prices of farm products, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which has completed a study of the primary factors affecting the financial difficulties of the farmer based on a survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Seventeen per cent of the farmers feel that high taxes are the direct cause of the farm depression, eleven per cent blame the high costs for farm labor, ten per cent feel that high freight rates are responsible, ten per cent blame the high interest, six per cent credit the depression to reckless expenditures during boom period, and four per cent think it was too much credit.

An inquiry made by the Department of Agriculture through both bankers and farmers shows that on an average 5 per cent of the farm owners in 15 corn and wheat-producing states lost their farms through foreclosure or bankruptcy during the late depression. Four and a half per cent more had turned over their farms to creditors without legal process, making a total of about 9.5 per cent who had lost their farms with or without legal proceedings. An additional 15 per cent were really bankrupt, but were holding on through the leniency of their creditors. By groups of states the percentage of owner-farmers who lost their farms since 1920 were as follows: Five East North Central states, nearly 6 per cent; seven North Central states, over 9 per cent; and for the three Mountain states nearly 20 per cent. The percentage of tenants who lost their property ran materially higher.

THE MAN WHO DOES HIS BEST

By J. E. Hungerford in "The Searchlight."

No matter how little he's getting;
No matter how little he's got,
If he wears a grin, and is trying to win—
He is doing a mighty lot!
No matter how humble his job is,
If he's striving to reach the crest,
The world has a prize for the fellow who tries—
The man who is doing his best!

Today he may be at the bottom
Of the ladder to wealth and fame,
On the lowest rung, where he's bravely clung,
In spite of the knocks—dead game!
But slowly he's gaining a foothold,
His eyes on the uppermost round;
It's a hard old climb, but he knows in time
He will land—and be looking down!

The fellow who never surrenders,
And is taking things as they come;
Who never says "quit," and exhibits grit,
When the whole world's looking glum;
The fellow who stays to the finish
That nothing can hinder or stop,
And who works like sin, is the chap who'll win—
And some day he'll land on top!
